The Birth of a New Journal

On behalf of all members of the editorial board, we heart fully welcome you to our new journal, International Journal of Research in Health Services. In this era of extraordinary and immense ascent of knowledge and publishing, we take an opportunity to unleash this journal to nullify the anomalies related to the research productivity from our sub-continent. Our pioneering efforts to instigate this journal have taken birth from a prolonged infelicitous experience with the existing medical journals being published in India. Most of the authors publishing from India are aware of the problems like editorial bias, delays in the review and publication timeframes. Every month about 20,000 biomedical journals are published either in print or online forms all over the world.

It is a non-profit, peer reviewed journal and will be published quarterly. Its available online. As medical science is fast expanding, this journal is a platform for young researchers for their publication in Public Health speciality and other Medicine related fields as it reaches globally. It publishes original research articles in the field of medicine and its allied branches. It invites original articles, short communications, case reports and review papers on recent advances in medical & health. The editorial board consists of experts chosen from different specialties to have a wider perspective. To meet with the expenses involved, we charge a nominal fee from the authors. We may consider the waiver of publication fees from student authors. We plan to release four issues per year with subject wise supplements as deemed necessary. Readers would be provided free access to published articles in PDF formats.

We aim to finish peer review within a fortnight and publish the accepted articles online in the immediate next issue. All the submitted articles shall be reviewed by an editorial board member, external peer reviewer and editor-in-chief before making the final decision. The popularity of a journal is gauged by the registration in different index agencies. Hence, we plan to include our journal in most of the citable indices and also achieve an early entry into Pub med with your relentless support. Please join us and nurture the journal into a renowned name in the field of medicine.
